Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the Fiery Furnace by Gustave Doré. This is a black and white illustration of the biblical story of the three Hebrews in the fiery furnace. The scene is set within a large, dark, stone-walled furnace. In the center, three men—Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego—stand calmly, facing the viewer. They are dressed in traditional robes. To their right, a large, muscular man, likely a Chaldean official, is shown in profile, pushing open a heavy, barred door. The floor of the furnace is covered with a layer of glowing, molten metal and debris. In the background, a large, arched opening reveals a bright, intense fire. The overall atmosphere is one of dramatic tension and divine intervention.

From the illustration "The Wise Men Guided by the Star" by Gustave Doré.

Now when Jesus was born, behold there came from the east three wise men to him, saying, 'We have seen thy star in the east, and we have come to worship thee.' When he heard them, he said, 'Rise, and follow me; for we have found the child, and we wish to worship him.' And he rose up, and went with them, and hid himself in the manger, with the ox and the ass. And when the wise men saw the child, they were astonished, and they worshipped him, and they offered him gifts of gold, and frankincense, and myrrour. And when they were departed, behold the star appeared again unto them, going before them, till it came and stood over the manger in which the child was. And when they saw it, they were glad, and they went and worshipped the child. And when they were departed, the star appeared again unto them, going before them, till it came and stood over the manger in which the child was. And when they saw it, they were glad, and they went and worshipped the child. And when they were departed, the star appeared again unto them, going before them, till it came and stood over the manger in which the child was.
